

HeatTeller™ Monitor
Model Number: 00588
Instruction Manual

You are holding a breakthrough, not only in technology, but in the safety of your loved ones. When temperatures are over 80 degrees, this device, The Van Harden™ HeatTeller™, monitors humidity and temperature, then automatically calculates and displays a heat index value. Exposure to a dangerously high heat index can cause sunstroke, heat cramps and heat exhaustion. The HeatTeller™ can be taken anywhere and used indoors or out.

Photos of the HeatTeller™ are on the last page of this manual.

To Operate:

Install (1) AAA Battery

Press the ON/OFF button

On the display you will see a --- : ---. The unit will then provide a reading.

If the temperature conditions are above 80° Fahrenheit, the unit will provide a Heat Index measurement. If the temperature is below 80° Fahrenheit, the unit will provide a temperature reading only.

Heat Index is a calculation of the temperature and humidity. This unit is designed to provide a heat index calculation when the temperature is at 80° or above.

Heat Index Chart:

Temperature (F) versus Relative Humidity (%)
↓	90% Humidity	80% Humidity	70% Humidity	60% Humidity	50% Humidity	40% Humidity
80° F	85	84	82	81	80	79
85° F	101	96	92	90	86	84
90° F	121	113	103	99	94	90
95° F	↓	133	122	113	105	98

Once the Temperature is about 80°, the bar graph in the display will begin to show the comfort level.

As the heat index rises, the colored bar will begin to display the heat index level. Should the bar reach cautionary levels, please take necessary precautions.

For accurate measurements keep the unit free of dirt and contaminants.

To replace battery – slide open the battery cover and replace the battery with a new AAA.
